Objectives

- To introduce students to the fundamentals of 3D modeling in interior design
- To develop skills in creating interior spaces digitally
- To train students in applying materials, lighting, and textures
- To enhance rendering and presentation techniques

Summary Report

The Department of Interior Design and Décor organized a comprehensive 10-day workshop on “3D Modeling in Design” with the objective of strengthening students digital visualization, spatial planning, and technical modeling skills in alignment with current industry standards. In today’s design environment, the ability to present concepts through realistic three-dimensional models has become essential for client communication and project execution. Keeping this in view, the workshop provided intensive hands-on training using industry-relevant softwares AutoCAD, SketchUp, V-Ray, 3dsMax. The sessions were carefully structured to progress from basic interface understanding and tool navigation to advanced modeling, material application, lighting techniques, and high-quality rendering outputs.

During the workshop, students were trained to create detailed interior components such as walls, ceilings, flooring layouts, doors, windows, and customized furniture, interior and Exterior Spaces units while maintaining correct scale and proportion. Special emphasis was given to space planning principles, ergonomic considerations, and realistic material finishes simulating real-world interior environments. The training also covered texture mapping, application of surface finishes like wood, marble, glass, and fabric, and the integration of natural and artificial lighting to achieve visually impactful renderings.

The workshop significantly enhanced students' confidence in digital modeling, improved their problem-solving abilities in spatial visualization, and strengthened their readiness for internships and professional assignments. Feedback from participants reflected high levels of satisfaction, particularly regarding the practical exposure and clarity of instruction. Overall, the 10-day workshop proved to be a valuable academic initiative that successfully bridged theoretical knowledge with technological application, thereby equipping Interior Design students with essential skills required in the contemporary design industry.

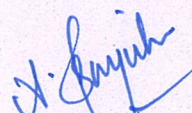

Outcome of the Program

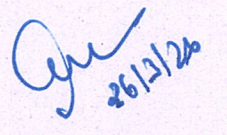

- Gained fundamental knowledge of 3D modeling in interior design.
- Developed skills to create complete interior spaces digitally.
- Acquired practical experience in 3ds Max software.
- Learned material application, lighting, and rendering techniques.
- Improved portfolio development and industry readiness.
