Summary

The session on Professional Development in the Teaching-Learning Process focused on enhancing educators' abilities to create an engaging and effective learning environment. The class began with an introduction to contemporary teaching methodologies, emphasizing the integration of Bloom's Taxonomy to design learning objectives and outcomes. Participants were introduced to active learning strategies such as collaborative projects, peer teaching, and flipped classroom models. Modern educational technologies, including Learning Management Systems (LMS) and interactive tools were demonstrated to enhance classroom engagement. The session also involved hands-on activities, where educators designed lesson plans aligned with learning objectives, incorporated technology, and practiced assessment methods. The interactive and reflective approach helped educators identify areas for growth while fostering a collaborative learning atmosphere.

Outcome of the Programme

1. Participants will demonstrate the ability to design and implement student-centered learning activities that align with educational objectives.
2. Educators will effectively integrate digital tools and modern technologies to create an interactive and collaborative learning environment.
3. Participants will develop critical self-reflective practices, leading to ongoing improvement in their teaching methodologies and strategies.
